

In the Desert of Your Mind

In the desert of your mind the wild stallions will run free. Unbridled and unbroken thoughts trampling on what Jesus has already set free.

These thoughts feel like punishment that you cannot escape. Their purpose is to destroy what is good; a deceivingly, total mind rape.

In God's word it says you are not to rely on your own understanding, but instead put your total trust in Him. Then God will use what seems like punishment as preparation to help others come to Him.

God never tempts you like the evil one, instead He tests you to search your heart. For He wants you to learn to listen to Him as you faith walk by giving God your heart.

And when you encounter these times of uncertainty and the wild stallions begin to run free, remember it was in the desert that Jesus used God's word to force Satan to flee.

God did not make you with a spirit of timidity or fear, but of Power and Love and Sound Mind. By taking these thoughts captive to the obedience of Christ, you will be set free in the desert of your mind.

Robert W. Roddy, Jr.